The Home Health Aide Handbook

Individuals with disabilities, chronic conditions, and functional impairments need a range of services and supports to keep living independently. However, there often is not a strong link between medical care provided in the home and the necessary social services and supports for independent living. Home health agencies and others are rising to the challenges of meeting the needs and demands of these populations to stay at home by exploring alternative models of care and payment approaches, the best use of their workforces, and technologies that can enhance independent living. All of these challenges and opportunities lead to the consideration of how home health care fits into the future health care system overall. On September 30 and October 1, 2014, the Institute of Medicine and the National Research Council convened a public workshop on the future of home health care. The workshop brought together a spectrum of public and private stakeholders and thought leaders to improve understanding of the current role of Medicare home health care in supporting aging in place and in helping high-risk, chronically ill, and disabled Americans receive health care in their communities. Through presentations and discussion, participants explored the evolving role of Medicare home health care in caring for Americans in the future, including how to integrate Medicare home health care into new models for the delivery of care and the future health care marketplace. The workshop also considered the key policy reforms and investments in workforces, technologies, and research needed to leverage the value of home health care to support older Americans, and research priorities that can help clarify the value of home health care. This summary captures important points raised by the individual speakers and workshop participants.

The Home Health Aide Textbook

It is my hope that this text, when properly used will be of great benefit to the individual aide or aide in training in mastering the required skills that would make the individual a good home health aide. The book has been specially tailored as a teaching tool for home health aides. The book has two sections, the tutorial section one and the practical hands on section two. The second section is a good aide or good training tool for practical demonstration purposes. For the purpose of understanding only, a home health aide does not have to be a Certified Nurse Aide. As a result this book can be used to train and prepare an individual to function in the capacity of a home health aide. The agency must prepare a set of standardized tests for the aides to ensure that the individual have fully internalized the reaching and training that they have been put through. This book further addresses the rule and regulation (federal and State) that the home health aide must be familiar with. This book is an excellent tool for the home health aide. I strongly encourage all individual who practice and plans to practice as an aide in the home health field to read this book.

This lesson on Home Health Aides & State Surveys includes a complete training packet. Each in-service packet takes approximately one hour to complete and fully meets the Medicare in-service training requirements. As aides need training, you can make as many copies as you want - there's no restriction when used with aides assigned from your office location. Remember that Home Health Aides must have 12 hours of in-service training every year. LESSON OBJECTIVES After completion of this program, the home health aide will be able to: - Describe two reasons why homecare surveys are performed - List three primary methods for surveying home health aide services - Explain the responsibilities of the home health aide during home visits LESSON OVERVIEW The survey of homecare agencies is an anxious time for all concerned. It is particularly troublesome for home health aides since they often do not understand how the survey is conducted and what role they are expected to play. Failure to meet the standard for home health aide services can result in a Condition-level deficiency for the agency. During a survey, home visits will be made to observe home health aide care delivery. Aide documentation and employee files will be reviewed. The topic of the survey is an important one for home health aides since they will always be directly and indirectly involved in the process. The information presented in this program will help to explain the process, as well as outline the responsibilities of the home health aide during a survey.

This lesson on Home Health Aide Professionalism includes a complete training packet. Each in-service packet takes approximately one hour to complete and fully meets the Medicare in-service training requirements. As aides need training, you can make as many copies as you want - there's no restriction when used with aides assigned from your office location. Remember that Home Health Aides must have 12 hours of in-service training every year. LESSON OBJECTIVES Upon completion of this program, the home health aide will be able to: Describe two examples of professional workplace behavior Identify three characteristics of acting professionally Explain two ways to treat patients professionally OVERVIEW Professional behavior in the workplace can be difficult to define. Professionalism means different things to different people and can vary from agency to agency. It is something that isn't formally taught and is often left up to the home health aide to figure out. Further, behavior that some patients may find perfectly acceptable may offend others. It is therefore important that home health aides know what actions make up professional behavior and put those into practice. Home health aides must be aware of the agency's standards and there must be proof that aides follow them. The agency's reputation, and the health and safety of patients, depend on this knowledge and practice. This aide in-service outlines professional behavior and will serve as a guideline to training the home health aide on professionalism.

2015 Third Edition. The ninety-five Home Health nursing care plans and plan of care forms in this book cover every nursing diagnosis and care plan problem that may be generated from the OASIS-C form for the nursing plan of care. Also includes Pain Care manual. Terminology is based on OASIS-C language and nursing diagnosis definitions and classifications as outlined by the North American Nursing Diagnosis Association (NANDA). The home health nursing care plan format follows the care plan standards from the American Nurses Association. The first section of the book covers regulations and standards for nursing care plans, Home Health Nursing care plan components, and Quality Measures and Outcome Measures. Because the terminology of the home health nursing care plan is based on OASIS-C language, it is very easy to see which care plans and plan of care forms are triggered by the OASIS-C entries. The home health nursing care plans can be used to supplement the nursing plan of care, and are also extremely useful for teaching patients and caregivers. All of the home health nursing care plans and nursing plan of care forms in the book are also on the CD. When the CD is placed in a computer, the care plans can be opened in a word processor. Entries can be added or deleted to individualize home health nursing care plans.

along with limited supervision, make identifying and dealing with ethical issues a challenge. For home health aides, ethical issues in the home may be due to patient care concerns, patient choice, family involvement, and the aide's personal involvement and compliance with agency policies and laws. To understand the risk involved and act responsibly, the aide must have an understanding of ethics and be able to recognize and report potential ethical issues. This in-service provides an in-depth look at ethics, ethical issues in the home, and the home health aide's role in preventing or resolving these problems.
